ل

A. ل lâm The twenty-sixth letter of the Turkish and Persian alphabets, twenty-third of the Arabic. Its phonetic value is that of l. It has the numerical value of 30 in chronograms and mathematical formulæ. It represents the lunar month Shewwal in the dates of documents.

In Turkish grammar, quiescent itself, and preceded by an esere vowel, it forms the passive verb when suffixed to the active root; thus; سو love thou, سول be thou loved. In this use the ل is sometimes replaced and sometimes preceded by ن

The ل of the Arabic definite article remains unchanged in pronunciation when preceding an initial ل. But exceptionally the word الذى suppresses the ل of the article in writing, and reduplicates the radical ل in pronunciation.

In the Arabic definite article ال, the ل is deemed the essential part of the word, which, in consequence, is always mentioned as the ل of definition, (لام التعريف)

A. ل lè, adv. 1. Verily. 2. By, for, for the sake of.

A. ل li, prep. 1. For. 2. In favor of. 3. To, belonging to. 4. م

A. م mîm. The 24th letter of the Arabic, and 27th of the Persian and Turkish alphabets. Its phonetic value is m. It has the numerical value of 40 in chronograms and astronomical tables.

In the dates of letters it is the abbreviation for محرم muharrem, the first month of the Arabian year. In philological and similar works, it is the abbreviation of the word معلوم (well known). At the end of a writing or book it stands for the word تم (it has become complete), in the sense of finis.

As the abbreviation of the word یوم (day), it is used in calendars to represent Saturday. It is one of the symbolical letters inscribed at the commencement of chapters of the Qur'an.

In Arabic grammar and derivation, the letter م fills several very important functions as a servile initial to derivative words. In the first place, it is the initial letter, in words deriving from the primitive triliteral chapter, of the passive participle (اسم مفعول nomen patientis), a servile long vowel و being then inserted between the second and third radicals; as: فعل fa'ala (he did), مفعول mef'ūl (done); قتل qatala (he killed), مقتول maqtūl (killed).

In the second place م is the initial of the primitive derivative named the noun of time and place (اسم زمان اسم مكان), and also the noun of receptacle (اسم ظرف); as, مكتب mėktȧb (a place for writing, a school), موضع mėvzi' (a place of putting, of situation, a site). These forms are sometimes verbal nouns (مصدر ميمى); as, مقتل (a killing); and sometimes nouns of the place of abundance (اسم كثرت); as, مأسده (a place of lions).

It is also the initial of a class of derivatives, which designate the instrument of action (اسم آلت); as, مفتاح (r. فتح) an opening tool, a key, مقراض miqrāz (r. قرض) a clipping tool, a scissors. These forms are sometimes nouns of the vessel (اسم وعا); as, مبول mibvėl (r. بول) a urinal, محلب mihlib (r. حلب) a milking-pail, etc.

In the derived chapters, the م is the initial of every active participle (اسم فاعل) and passive participle (اسم مفعول) the only difference in each pair being that the active participle has ėsėrė as the vowel of its second radical, whereas the passive participle has ůstůn.

The form of the passive participle (rarely) becomes also a verbal noun, or a noun of time and place. It is also the initial letter of the first verbal noun of the third chapter of derivation, being then movent with ůtůrů.

In Persian Ottoman words the only grammatical use of م is as a final servile preceded by ůtůrů, to form the ordinal numbers; as, يكم yėkyům (first), دوم důyům (second), etc.

In Ottoman grammar, the letter م has many important uses. Movent with ůstůn, it forms, as a servile termination, the root of the negative verb; as, كيمامك gimȧmėk (not to wear); كيغامك giyinmȧmėk (not to put on); سويلشمامك sůvėylȧshmȧmėk (not to converse together); etc.

Followed by ق or ك it forms the servile termination of the infinitive of every Turkish verb.

As a servile final preceded by ėsėrė (except in the optative and conditional), it forms the first person singular of every tense of the verb; as, يازيورم yȧziyȯrim (I am writing); يازيوردم yȧziyȯrdim (I was writing); etc.

As a servile final preceded by a vowel and added to a primitive verbal root, it forms a noun of action, and also a noun of quantity performed by one action; as, آتيم ȧtim (an act of throwing; a quantity thrown at once; a distance to which one act throws).

Joined as a servile final to a noun, substantive or adjective, it is the verb substantive I am; as, آدمم ȧdȧmim (I am a man).

With substantives ending in consonants, it is the possessive pronoun of the first person singular; as, آدمم ȧdȧmim (my man), اوغلم ȯghůlům (my son). But if the substantive end in a vowel, the possessive pronoun becomes a final to the last syllable of the substantive itself; as, بابام bȧbȧm (my father).

A very peculiar trivial use of the letter م in conversational Ottoman Turkish, to express a collection or a distinction of various things, while naming only one of them, is by repeating the name of that thing with its initial letter changed into م; as اساس آلاى مالاى, مساس giving the meaning of "and such things".

ن

A. ن nûn. The twenty-eighth letter of the Turkish and Persian alphabets, twenty-fifth of the Arabic. Its phonetic value is N. In chronograms it has the value of 50. In dates of documents it represents the month of Ramazan.

ن is of the "solar" class, so that the ل of the Arabic article is changed in pronunciation to ن when prefixed to a word which commences with this letter.

In Arabic grammar this letter fulfils several functions. Firstly, it is the distinctive factor, as a servile, in forming the seventh chapter of triliteral derivation, called انفعال بابی; it is prefixed, quiescently, to the radicals, while a servile ا is inserted between the second and third radicals to form the verbal noun, and a hemze of junction" (همزة الوصل) precedes the ن; as, from هزم we get انهزام. Secondly, ن precedes the other letters of the word in the first person plural of the aorist tense of the Arabic verb; thus: نعلم nâ'lâm. we know, لا نسلم lâ nûsêllîm. we surrender not, etc. Thirdly, movent with ustun, it ends the third person plural feminine of the arabic preterite; as: قلن qûlnâ. they said. These forms are only met with in quotations.

In Turkish words the letter ن movent with esere and followed by ك, forms the genitive of nouns ending with a vowel; as: بابانك bâbânîn. of a or the father, etc. In the declension of the suffixed possessive pronoun of the third person, singular and plural, in all cases but the nominative, the letter ن appears to represent the possessive suffix, thus, صقالی sâqâlî. his beard, صقالنك sâqâlînîn. صقالنی sâqâlînî. etc. Preceded by a servile vowel ی, and causing the final ق or ك of the infinitive to change into غ or softened ك, the ن forms and terminates the sixth gerund; as; باقغين bâqmâghîn. etc. In the derivation of Turkish verbs, the ن forms the root-word of the indeterminate conjugations, active and passive; as, باقق bâqmâq. باقنمق bâqînmâq. When the primitive root-word of a Turkish congeries of verbs ends with ل, the root-word of the primitive passive is formed with ن in lieu of the normal ل; thus: اولمق ôlmâq. اولنمق ôlûnmâq; بولمق bûlmâq. بولنمق bûlûnmâq. etc. The same substitution of ن for ل takes place in the passive when the primitive root-word ends in a vowel, but then ل may be added after the ن; thus: آرامق ârâmâq. آرانمق ârânmâq. ارانلمق ârânîlmâq.

A. و wâw, wov, wò. The twenty ninth letter of the Turkish and Persian alphabets, twenty sixth of the Arabic. Its phonetic value, as a consonant, is usually that of V, sometimes that of W; sometimes it has a peculiar sound of its own, that begins as a V and than becomes converted into a W.

But this letter is also a vowel, always long in Arabic and Persian words, with the value of û. In Turkish and foreign words the vowel is generally, if not always, short, and may have the value of ò, ù, û, ûu. This last value is given to it even in the Persian word کور kyûr, become vernacular in Turkish.

It represents the numeral 6 in chronograms and mathematical formulæ.

When, in an Arabic word, a consonantal hemze is movent with an uturu vowel, it is written as a و with the hemze sign over it; as, تفوّل tèfè'ûl, رؤوس rû'ûs. The long vowel و following such hemze is frequently omitted; as, رؤف rè'ûf (for رؤوف*).* If final in a word, after a quiescent consonant, the hemze alone is sometimes figured; as, جزء jûz'û (for جزؤ*);* and this final hemze is generally suppressed when such words pass into Turkish; as, جز jûz (for جزء*)*, etc. But, if the preceding consonant be movent with uturu, the final ؤ is retained; as تجزؤ tèjèzzû'è.

The same change takes place when the consonant preceding the hemze is movent with uturu; as, مؤمن mû'-mîn; unless such preceding consonant be followed by a long vowel و; when the hemze takes its own form; as, مقروء mâqrû'è.

A. و vè. conj. 1. And, also, too. 2. Or. 3. But. 4. (in an oath) By. (In Persian construction of pairs of words, this conjunction, with the sense of and, or or, is generally pronounced û or ûu.) والسلام (And then, "Good bye"!) The question is at an end, all is said. والله 1. By God! 2. For God's sake!

ه, ه

A. ه, ه hâ, vulg. hè The thirtieth letter of the Turkish and Persian, and twenty seventh of the Arabic alphabet. Its phonetic value, as a consonant, is that of h, being the soft aspirate, as ح is the hard. Care must always be taken to sound this aspirate, but there are no words of Turkish origin that end with an aspirate ه.

As a vowel, ه has the phonetic value of è or â. As a final vowel in an Arabic word, it always replaces a letter ة, the sign of the feminine or of unity.

The medial vowel ه is never joined to the following consonant; as, باقه جق; اودیه كرمك. But the aspirate consonantal ه is joined to syllables which may be suffixed; as, راهلر rahlèr, شاهك shâhìñ. پادشاهلری pâdìshâhlèrì.

The letter ه has the numeric value of 5 in chronograms and in astronomical formulæ.

In Arabic grammar the only uses of the letter ه, representing a final ة, is to form the feminine and the noun of unity. At the end of Persian words, (1) it gives a substantive a secondary or special meaning; as: دسته dèstè, دندانه dèndânè. (2) it forms adjectives of periods of time; as: روزه rûzè, ساله sâlè. In Turkish verbs it forms the optative and the fifth gerund; as باقه, كله.

T. ه è, â, prep. 1. To. 2. Towards. (When the word to which this preposition is suffixed ends with a vowel ا, و, ه, or ى, the preposition becomes يه yè, yâ; as: بابايه bàbâyâ).

ی

A. ی yȧ, vulg. yĕ. The thirty first letter of the Turkish and Persian alphabets and twenty eighth of the Arabic. Its phonetic value as a consonant is that of the English y. As a vowel its phonetic value is ı, ĭ, or i or, as a final in some Arabic words, ȧ.

An initial ی is always a consonant; a medial ی may be a consonant or a vowel. In Arabic and Persian words the medial vowel ی is always long; but in Turkish and foreign words it is generally short, being introduced or omitted at the pleasure of the writer; as, کاوریز or کاورز, کمك or کیمك, etc. A final radical vowel ی in an Arabic word is always short; as قاضی qȧ'zĭ, vulg. qȧdı. ثانی sȧnı, etc.

From its position in the word حطی of the ابجد formula, ی has the numeric value of 10 in chronograms and in mathematical tables.

The letter ی has several very important grammatical uses in Arabic. As a servile vowel between the second and third radicals of triliterals, it forms adjectives or adjectival substantives; as, طویل tȧ'vĭl; امیر ĕmir. As a final reduplicated servile it forms relative adjectives; as, عربی 'ȧ'rĕbĭyy, vulg. 'ȧ'rĕbi. هندی hindiyy, vul. hindi. As a final servile, short vowel with the value of ȧ it forms certain feminines, and is then sometimes written ا; as, قصوی or قصوا qŭsvȧ. Suffixed to a substantive as a short vowel, it is the Arabic possessive pronoun of the first person singular; as, ابی ĕbı, ربی rȧ'bbı; and is often suppressed in this last, which is written رب, but still pronounced rȧbbı.

ی undergoes certain permutations with ه, ا, and و, for which Arabic grammar must be studied.

As a servile final vowel suffixed to Persian substantives, ی forms relative adjectives, as, شیرازی shirȧzı. شاهی shȧhı. Suffixed to an adjective, it forms an abstract substantive; as, سفیدی sĕfidı. سیاهی siyȧhı. It also, as a servile consonant, takes the vowel of construction after a word ending in vowel ا or و; as, دریای آمو dĕryȧyı ȧmŭ.

In Turkish grammar, as a short vowel suffix, it is the possessive pronoun of the third person singular after words ending with a consonant, and becoming سی sı, sĭ, after words ending with a vowel; as اوغلی oghŭlŭ. باباسی bȧbȧsĭ. It also forms the accusative case definite, and becomes یی yı, yĭ, after a vowel; as قیزی qĭzĭ. انایی 'ȧnȧyĭ. When, by rules of Arabic grammar, a hemze (ء) has to be written in the middle of a word over a dentation (ٔ) it is more commonly changed in Turkish writing into a ی; as دایم dȧyĭm, for دائم dȧ'ĭm. If the hemze be followed by a ی, it should never be changed; thus, رئیس rĕ'ĭs. should not be written ریس rĕyĭs.

When the letter ی is isolated, and when it ends a word, its dots are always omitted in Turkish.
